Thought for the month: The Kingfisher.

Some of you may know Medbourne. It's a pretty village about 30 miles away, in Rutland. It's one of those villages which, like Wolston, has a brook running through it, and one day last August I was sitting beside the brook, waiting for some cousins whom we had arranged to meet there for a pub lunch.

And that's when I saw the kingfisher. I hadn't seen one since I was a child, and I'd forgotten how tiny they are, and how vivid that iridescent blue plumage is. He suddenly appeared and alighted on a stone at the edge of the water, not more than 6 feet from where I was sitting on the top of the bank. I could hardly believe that I was being so privileged as to see one after so many years, and so nearby.

He sat there for perhaps a minute, then he was gone, a streak of vivid blue, swift as an arrow, upstream, under the bridge and out of my sight.

I had the feeling that I had seen something significant, a vision almost, although the kingfisher was real enough, vibrantly alive as he came to perch near me for a moment, then flew off beyond the bridge, where I could see him no more.

When we got home that afternoon, we heard that our dear friend had died, probably about an hour after I had seen the kingfisher.

And it seemed to me that the kingfisher was a sign to me. The way he was so vividly alive there beside me, then swiftly darted away out of my sight, beyond the bridge. I couldn't see him any more, but I knew that he was still alive, somewhere upstream, the other side of the bridge. And I knew too that, although we could no longer see our friend, he too was vibrantly alive, somewhere upstream, beyond the bridge.

And I knew that, wherever he was, he was all right.

The Bells of St. Giles....

FORTHCOMING EVENT

Although the Queen's actual birthday was in April, the Palace announced that the main celebrations will be held over the weekend of the 10th -12th June 2016 to coincide with her official birthday.

As part of the Queen's 90th Birthday celebrations, ringers from the Coventry Guild of Church Bellringers are going to attempt to ring 90 quarter peals at 90 different towers within the Guild. Realising that this was probably a little ambitious to attempt this over the official weekend, the ringing will be spaced over a period of a week to 10 days. All special ringing events will be recorded in the Palace archives.

We are therefore pleased to announce that as part of these celebrations a quarter peal will be rung at St Giles, Bubbenhall. This will take place on Saturday 11 June at 11am.

Please listen out for the bells – the churchyard is a good place to listen, especially if the weather is warm and sunny.

Tailpiece: ...out of the mouths of babes...

A Sunday school teacher was discussing the Ten Commandments with her five- and six-year-olds. After explaining the commandment to "Honour thy father and thy mother," she asked, "Is there a commandment that teaches us how to treat our brothers and sisters?" Without missing a beat, one little boy answered, "Thou shalt not kill."
